“ My sister and I shared a bedroom so we naturally had a "few" arguments but she took care of me too. When I decided I wanted to go to a public high school instead of the Catholic high school where I wore uniforms she took me shopping and bought me a couple of cute outfits. Once I was an adult and looked back at our childhood I did feel "sorta" bad that my sister always got stuck doing the dishes because I was to little! She also went out and bought a 67' brand new Mustang before she even had her drivers licence...pretty gutsy girl!!!!

“ When she was learning to drive, I took out to Cheney to take her driver's test. She took it three times. She kept run a stop sign. So the third time, I waited by the stop sign. When I saw her coming I stepped out into the street. She passed.
